i'm spending my precious week tomorrow at some capitalist-something-something-conference. expect nothing but incoherent rants and uncensored quotes sometimes with missing context. wish me good luck to get through this.

i'll be so busy reporting, i'll try to keep busy and stay out of the way of all the busybusybusiness
people.

WAVE LIFE

“I don’t wear sweatpants
on short flights”

i am not here by choice, it says on my imaginary tote
bag

they gave me the newest foodtrend as a welcome
gift and told me it tastes terrible

i pay with my wrist, i must not remove the small chip during the city visit. The most famous neoliberal TV faces
appear today.

coffee is expensive and really bad. there's only one brand that bought exclusive coffee rights. group and mass dynamics work like in your office, hierarchy patriarchy obedience with a free choice of food truck. prices for food are not listed, i guess they're expensive

—mindset billionaire—

you get “free” stuff everywhere. workers running around starting smalltalk and beg you to register the qr code. they get 200 bucks for a nine hour day plus provision. they don't get the free drugs for themselves. everyone is trying to make a cut.

they tell themselves
it's all pretty hyped
among the young peeps.

i take the commercial
break now and chill
in front of some squat
space. summer vibes
don't go back

shallow festivities of the fatalist church of obedient moneyassholes

crossing the crowd one more time to get to another park. parks are packed with sun and nice dogs.

everyone is tired and
pretends to be woke
